"Perpetual optimism is a force multiplier."

- Colin Powell, former U.S. Secretary of State

Letter from the Editor:

There comes a time when the employment relationship with one of your team members may end. To mitigate the risks during this situation, it's important to have strict policies and procedures in regards to human resource management, physical security, and IT security. We hope these articles will give you some useful tips!

Simple Protection During the Termination Process

Internal threats are dangerous to IT Security. When a team member ceases to be employed at your company, it's important to have a consistent process, even for your best employees. After all, employees have access to your most sensitive information (especially those who have been with the organization for many years).

Protect Your Organization from Your Organization

Did you know the greatest information security threat facing your organization may be sitting in the office right now? This threat has the ability to bypass the physical and logical controls in place to protect the perimeter of your organization's network and has already obtained credentials to access a significant portion of the organization's infrastructure.

Alexis Komondorea, Billing Manager

WorkSmart strives to be the premier provider in Information Technology services. With colleagues like Alexis, this initiative is

"Alexis is an integral part to the WorkSmart team. Her role is the vital intersection between service and customer satisfaction, and she excels at it!" Ricky Ayers, WorkSmart CFO possible.

Alexis joined WorkSmart in March of 2007. Since then, she has been a great asset to WorkSmart. Her spirit is uplifting and she is always ready to help anyone in need. Her colleagues view her as a pleasure to work with, which may be the reason she won WorkSmart's Impact Award in 2008 (an award that is given to a team member that demonstrates outstanding performance and values)! Always making sure everyone is eating healthy, she also ensures that the office has a fully supply of Diet Coke!

In order for you to get to know her better, we asked her a few questions. Here are her answers:
